MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT:

Dear TIAHA Brothers,

Are you involved? That was how I finished last month’s message, and I totally intend to keep this as our 2008 slogan. Being involved doesn’t ask about how many times you come to club affairs; or how much time you spend working some of our charitable functions; or often you volunteer to work some event or other. Are you involved to me is; are you spending time with your TIAHA Brothers, and are you living up to the oath we all took when we first joined this club and renew each year.

Everyone should take out their membership card and read the oath on the back. And then go back and read it again. Our founding members put a lot of thought and meaning into that pledge and we, as TIAHA Brothers, should renew our vow within ourselves to “foster the social and cultural interests of individuals of Italian-American heritage.” Come to the meetings but if you can’t make the meetings, read the minutes of both the General Meeting and Board Meetings. It’s a great way to keep up with what’s happening and a good gauge of the club’s activities, feelings, etc.

On a bittersweet note: I am saddened to report that Al Dellechiaie, our Vice President, will be leaving us for a year. Al runs a company that does CAD (Computer Aided Design) was offered, and accepted, a position to do a special project in India. It’s just too good of an offer both financially and career wise to pass up so he will be leaving in early May. Since he joined TIAHA, Al has proven to be a work horse and has participated in many events. And he sure can cook. He will be missed.

Sal Notarmaso will move from Member at Large into the Vice President position and, I am happy to report, Dave Baron will return to the Board as Member at Large.

That being said, we have a bunch of exciting events and social gatherings coming this month and throughout the remainder of the warm weather months and throughout 2008. On Saturday April 19th we will be going to the Healing Place for Women to cook and serve another meal. A will be there and is going to hold a "cooking class" for some special items that we will most likely be selling at the International Festival in September.

Our annual softball game against the Irish is scheduled for April 27th at 3:00 at the K of C Field. We will be playing the game each year as the Ken Growney Annual Memorial Softball Challenge. It's a party day and even if you're not playing, come out and cheer on the team and have some great food and drink as well. Practice for players is April 20th at 2 PM at the K of C field.

Joe Frangiosa's Fishing and Crabbing Trip is in the planning stages for May or June so stay tuned for details on this fun event.

Come to the meeting on Wednesday the 16th and bring a prospective member with you. We've got a bunch of stuff coming up and this is going to be another great year to be a TIAHA member. Are you involved???

Frank Ferraro, President TIAHA.

Welcome to 3 Minute Management Course training in preparation for 2008 in 6 easy lessons:

Lesson 1/6

A man is getting into the shower as his wife is getting out, when the doorbell rings. She quickly wraps herself in a towel and runs down the stairs. She opens the door to Fred, the next door neighbor.

Before she says a word, Fred says, "I'll give you $800 to drop that towel." After thinking for a moment, she drops it and stands naked in front of Fred. After a few seconds, Fred hands her $800 and leaves.

Wrapping herself in the towel, as she gets to the bathroom, her husband asks: "Who was that?" "It was Fred the next door neighbor" she replies.

"Great!" the husband says, "did he say anything about the $800 he owes me?"

Moral of the story:

If you share critical information pertaining to credit and risk with your shareholders (and Management team), in time, you may be in a position to prevent avoidable exposure.

Lesson 2/6

A priest offered a Nun a lift. As she sat in the car, she could not help but reveal a leg. The priest nearly had an accident. After controlling the car, he stealthily slid his hand up her leg. The nun said, "Father, remember Psalm 129?" He removed his hand.

But, changing gears, he let his hand slide up her leg again. The nun once again said, "Father, remember Psalm 129?" The priest apologized "Sorry sister but the flesh is weak". Arriving at the convent, the nun went on her way.

On his arrival at the church, the priest rushed to look up Psalm 129. It said, "Go forth and seek, further up, you will find glory."

Moral of the story:

If you are not well informed in your job, you might miss a great opportunity.

Lesson 3/6

A sales rep, an administration clerk and their manager are walking to lunch when they find an antique oil lamp. They rub it and a Genie pops out. The Genie says, "I'll give each of you just one wish".

"Me first! Me first!" says the admin clerk. "I want to be in the Bahamas driving a speedboat, without a care in the world". Puff! She's gone.

"Me next! Me next!" says the sales rep. "I want to be in Hawaii relaxing on the beach with my personal masseuse, an endless supply of some Pina Coladas and the love of my life". Puff! He's gone.

"OK, you're up", the Genie says to the manager.

The manager says, "I want those two back in the office after lunch".

Moral of the story:

Always let your boss have the first say.

Lesson 4/6

An eagle was sitting on a tree resting, doing nothing. A small rabbit saw the eagle and asked him, "Can I also sit like you and do nothing?"

The eagle answered: "Sure, why not." So, the rabbit sat on the ground below the eagle and rested. All of a sudden, a fox appeared, jumped on the rabbit and ate it.

Moral of the story:

To be sitting and doing nothing, you must be sitting very, very high up.

Lesson 5/6

A turkey was chatting with a bull. "I would love to be able to get to the top of that tree," sighed the turkey, "but I haven't got the energy."

Well, why don't you nibble on some of my droppings?" replied the bull. "They're packed with nutrients."

The turkey pecked at a lump of dung, and found it actually gave him enough strength to reach the lowest branch of the tree. The next day, after eating some more dung, he reached the second branch. Finally, after a fourth night, the turkey was proudly perched at the top of the tree. He was promptly spotted by a farmer, who shot him out of the tree.

Moral of the story:

Bullshi* might get you to the top, but it won't keep you there.

Lesson 6/6

A little bird was flying south for the winter. It was so cold the bird froze and fell to the ground into a large field. While he was lying there, a cow came by and dropped some dung on him.

As the frozen bird lay there in the pile of cow dung, he began to realize how warm he was. The dung was actually thawing him out! He lay there all warm and happy, and soon began to sing for joy.

A passing cat heard the bird singing and came to investigate... Following the sound, the cat discovered the bird under the pile of cow dung, and promptly dug him out and ate him.

Moral of the story:(1) Not everyone who craps on you is your enemy.
(2) Not everyone who gets you out of crap is your friend.
(3) And when you're in deep doo doo, it's best to keep your mouth shut!

This ends the 3 minute management course, now get back to work.

Baseball Italiano: The great American pastime translated

By Frank Cerabino

Palm Beach Post Staff Writer

Sunday, March 18, 2007

R IVIERA BEACH — When Charles Butte got a phone call out of the blue from a filmmaker in California, he was confused.

"I couldn't really put 2 and 2 together when he started talking," said Butte, a retired Army lieutenant colonel who still wears a buzz cut and still, despite his years, looks very much like a guy who is ready to storm Normandy again.

Charles Butte, flanked by Nettuno baseball players, started the team in 1947 when men asked him about the game.

Bill Ingram/The Post

was used to bury America's war dead. The cemetery is just south of Rome and neighbors Anzio, where the Allied forces had landed and fought a long, bloody battle with the Germans near the end of World War II.

A movie?

Butte lives in a home on a quiet cul-de-sac overlooking the Intracoastal Waterway in Riviera Beach.

What sort of movie?

It had been so long ago, almost another lifetime, really, and here he was — at the grand old age of 86 — being thrown headlong into what he had assumed was a forgotten part of his past.

But as the man on the phone, an enterprising documentary filmmaker named Christopher Ralph, kept talking, it gradually became clear to Col. Butte, as he calls himself, that a chapter in his life, one that had been nearly unknown in his native land, was about to finally play out in a bigger way than he ever imagined.

"It made me happy to know that now it will be recorded history," Butte said.

No, it's not some war exploit. Sure, as a young lieutenant "Bud" Butte stormed the beach at Normandy and fought in the Battle of the Bulge.

But Butte's most notable contribution to history is something he did after the war.

He brought the game of baseball to Italy.

"It's interesting how things you do in your life, how they turn out," he said.

In 1947, Butte was sent to Italy, assigned to be the officer in charge of the cemetery near coastal Nettuno that

Butte had a small detachment of men under his command and hired 40 to 50 locals to dig the graves and maintain the cemetery grounds.

"One day, when we were working at the cemetery, a couple of the workers came up to me and asked me if I ever played baseball," Butte remembers. "In those days, the major leagues were dominated by the Italian players, the DiMaggios."

And the young men of Nettuno, who watched American newsreels with the soldiers, saw these Italian-American sports heroes and felt a long-distance kinship to them and this unknown game.

Butte said he looked at baseball as an opportunity to foster good relations between the occupying American troops and the people of Nettuno — which is Italian for Neptune.

So he asked for the Army to send him baseball equipment. With troop levels drawing down after the war, there was no shortage, he said.

"We could get anything we wanted," he said. "Bats, balls, gloves."

Then he contacted his colonel in Rome and got permission to use the grave-digging equipment to build the Italians a stadium of their own.

"We had earth movers, bulldozers, road graders," he said. "We never did it on working time. We always did it in the evenings and on Saturdays and Sundays."

The Army had come ashore at Anzio on sheets of pierced-steel planking that formed makeshift roadways for vehicles' trips across the sand. Much of that steel was still on the beach.

So Butte and his men rounded up the invasion planking and turned it into their stadium's grandstand.

"We made seats out of them," he said. "Two pieces and a piece on top, then you weld it."

He also requisitioned the Army for surplus khaki uniforms, which he found were also in plentiful supply after the war.

Engaging the women in town for tailoring, under the direction of his wife, who had accompanied him on his assignment, he turned the former uniforms into something that resembled baseball uniforms for the Italian players.

As for the field itself, Butte approached the local nobleman, Prince Steno Borghese, and asked if he could donate some of his land so the people of the town could have their own baseball stadium. The prince agreed.

"He liked sports," Butte said.

The grateful people in town named the stadium Campo Soft Ball Charles Butte, putting up a sign on the side of the road leading to it.

Butte said they were eager to play against the Americans and that while the fledgling Italian players were frequently athletic, they had little patience for the fundamentals of the game.

"They never watched the coach for signals," he remembers. "You might want them to bunt, but they didn't want to bunt, they wanted to knock the ball out to show how they could hit."

The young cemetery workers would go on to form Nettuno's first baseball team and become the storied heroes of their town. Eventually, they would fan out across Italy and start other teams, forming what would become the Italian amateur baseball league, a league that continues to play today.

Butte left his duty station at the cemetery in 1949, succeeded by Lt. Horace McGarity, who like Butte took an interest in fostering baseball among the Italians.

"I never thought when I left that it would go on," Butte said. "I figured that after a while it would just die out. But McGarity picked it up and carried it on."

The story of how the Italian league started is well-known in Italy, but not so well-known here in America.

Christopher Ralph, who was working in computer technical support near San Francisco, had no idea.

Six years ago, while browsing a baseball magazine, he saw the standings for an Italian baseball league. At the time, he was moonlighting as a cameraman for another baseball documentary called A Player to Be Named Later, the story of a minor league team in Indiana.

And he was casting about for a film project of his own.

Italian baseball?

"The facts were pretty scarce," Ralph said. "I called my friend John and we started to research it."

Ralph and his friend, John Borgonovo, eventually would decide to make a movie about Italian baseball, figuring that the best place to start would be Nettuno, because it had the oldest team in the league and proudly proclaims its baseball heritage in a country dominated by soccer.

"Welcome to Nettuno — City of Baseball" the sign outside Nettuno reads.

Ralph and his crew rented a room for two months in nearby Anzio and then slept on cots in Nettuno's baseball stadium for the next two months.

The 7,000-seat ballpark, called Steno Borghese Stadium, was rebuilt in the early 1990s and is not on the site of the city's original field.

The town's historian told Ralph about the team's origins and Charles Butte. When Ralph and his crew returned from Italy, they knew they had a movie worth making, but they weren't even sure that Butte, one of the central characters in their story, was still alive.

"It was very exciting to have a person of living history in our piece," said Ralph, who visited Florida two years ago to talk to Butte for the movie.

Six years in the making, Ralph's documentary City of Baseball is finally ready for its world premiere March 26 during the 16th annual Florida Film Festival at the Enzian Theater in Maitland.

"We all just loved the film," said Matthew Curtis, the programming director for the festival. "It's an unusual story, and an American story in Italy."

The selection committee picked the film as its feature presentation during the festival's Italian Cinema Night, skipping the usual fare of Italian classics by Fellini, De Sica and Tornatore.

"It's the first time we've had a documentary," Curtis said.

After the screening, a reception catered by the Olive Garden will feature Butte as the guest of honor. Butte's son, Charles, flew in from California last week so he could take his father there.

"I don't travel much anymore," the older Butte said, "but my son is coming, and he and I are going to take in the festivities. It will be quite a treat after all these years."

Then Col. Butte paused, the album holding his precious old photos sitting on the table in front of him.

"Just sitting here talking to you," he said, "sparks many memories that have been laying dormant for a long time."
